BREWER LOCALS.

Mr. Harry M. Prentiss arrived home from Bath yesterday morning.

Sch Woodcock is loading lumber at Gould and Hasting's mill.

Mr. Charles Holbrook is finishing the inside of his new residence on Main street.

Miss Emily Williston, of Cambridge, Mass., is visiting with Miss Annie Hardy, on Wilson street.

Mrs. George Lancy and daughter, of Hartland, are visiting with Miss Lizzie Currier, on Main street.

Miss Lottie Abbott, who has been in our city for several weeks past, returned to her home in Orono Saturday.

Schooner Celia F. was taken from the Brewer side of the river Saturday and was towed into Kenduskeag stream, where she will load with hay for Savannah.

A party of Bangor's amateur photographers were seen in Brewer yesterday afternoon, carrying a camera. It is expected that some fine views of Brewer's scenery were obtained.

Mrs. George Elliott and her youngest son leave to-day for their home in Somerville, Mass., by steamer Penobscot. Her older son is to spend the summer with his grandfather, Mr. Thomas Simmons, on Eastern Avenue.

At the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society connected with the First Congregational church last evening it was voted to contribute five dollars towards the county banner. If all the other societies in the county do as well, according to their size, a very nice banner can be purchased.

When the electric road was first completed and the crowds rode on it Sundays for amusement it was predicted that as soon as the novelty of it wore off they would cease to be patronized for this purpose. Yesterday the open tow cars were on and, during the latter part of the day especially, were well filled. When the new bridge is built this class of trade will doubtless increase.

One of the attractions of the First Congregational church is the flowers with which the pulpit is decorated every Sunday. The work is in charge of a committee chosen for that purpose from the Christian Endeavor Society, connected with the church, each member of the committee attending to it for one month of the term for which they are chosen. Yesterday the prominent feature in the decorations was white lilacs and the effect was very pleasing.

About 9 o'clock Saturday evening as John Snyder was driving over the bridge which crosses the railroad on Main street, the whiffletree on his buggy broke and the carriage coming against the horse frightened him so that he commenced to throw out his hind feet in a manner more vigorous than comfortable. Happily no damage was done to either carriage or horse, although the harness was broken some. With the assistance of some people who were near by the horse was quieted and so Mr. Snyder was enabled to proceed on his way.

The tennis players complain that boys from Bangor have been using their new tennis ground for a base ball field and have done quite a little damage there, cutting the ground all up by running around on it while it was soft, and tearing a hole in one of the nets. These boys may not have intended to do any harm, but they have no more right on the ground than they have in any private property, and this sort of thing should be stopped. Signs are to be placed on the grounds warning all persons who have no right there to keep off.

City Marshal Gregg found on the streets Saturday, at about noon, a little boy about four or five years of age, who had got lost and could not find his home. He took the little fellow in charge and after Mr. Howard Eldridge had given him some dinner, started out with him to find his friends. Very little clue as to who he was could be gained from the story he told, but fortunately he met a boy named Clish who was looking after the lost one, and he took charge of him. The child's friends should feel very thankful that he fell into such kind hands as those of our City Marshal.

The Page intermediate school made an excursion to Squaw Point, Saturday, on the steamer Annie, going on the 7 A. M. boat and returning at 5 P. M. While there the base ball nine of the school played a nine of about their size and age belonging in Hampden, defeating them by a score of 9 to 7, so we see that the younger ball nines of our city can hold up Brewer's end as well as our more experienced players. From the reports it is evident that the scholars thoroughly enjoyed the day's outing and will remember it for a long time.

Yesterday forenoon the holly water was shut off for a few hours on account of some slight repairs which were being made at the pumping station. In the future people will do well to draw before 9 o'clock Sunday morning what water they will need for a few hours, as there are liable at any time to be small repairs to be made, and Sunday morning has been chosen as the most convenient time to make them, as at this time the mills which are supplied by the company are not using water and people in general are at church and not using it. These small repairs are made in such a way that in event of a fire occurring, water can be supplied in a few moments. When repairs, or other work making it necessary to shut the water off, are made which will consume more than two hours, special notice will be given of it.

School Vacations.

All of the schools close on Friday, June 19th, for the summer vacation. The old custom of public examinations of the schools is nearly abolished in this city, and few if any will hold them at the close of this term. People can get a much better idea of what the scholars are doing by visiting them during the term and seeing them in their every day school life, than in the old way of "examination day," a hot, crowded, school-room, teacher and scholars anxious to do well, and by the time the day is through all tired out, and many other features of the way it used to be.

The usual class parts will not be assigned to the graduating class of the High School this year, one cause of this being the number of changes that have been made in the teachers. On the night that the usual exercises would be held, June 19th, Rev. H. C. Foss, pastor of Grace church, Bangor, will give an address in the City Hall, followed by a programme of a musical nature, and the awarding of diplomas. At the close of this the graduating class will give a reception to parents and friends in the hall.

It has been customary for the alumni to tender the out-going class a reception and receive them into the association on the same evening that the graduating exercises occurred, but as the first reception will not probably be finished till a late hour, some other plan will probably have to be followed.

One way that has been proposed is to have the annual excursion of the society early in the week following the exercises and [illegible] down river [illegible] an [illegible] way of [illegible] nothing [illegible]

A THRIVING TOWN.

Some of the Important Facts Learned About Pittsfield.

The Maine Central Institute Doing Good Educational Work.

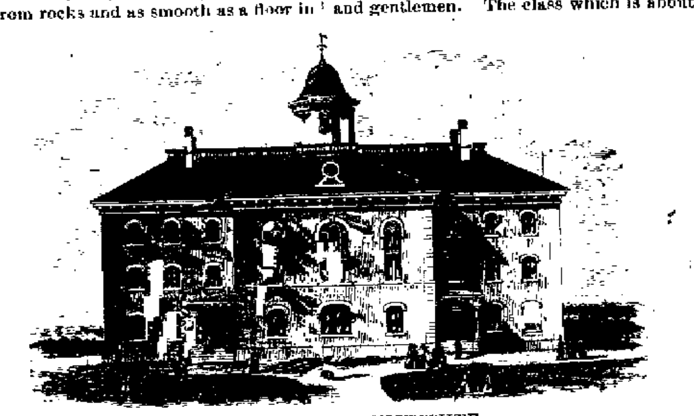

Great Improvements to be Made About the Institution.

A Short History of What Has Been and Is Being Done.

Some of the Industries of the Town and Points of Interest.

A WHIG representative who chanced to be in the town of Pittsfield last week was struck by the general air of thrift and enterprise which pervaded it and took the pains to go about and learn something about a place which gave such gratifying indications. What was gleaned may be of interest to the readers of the WHIG as it was to the reporter. Many pleasant attentions were accorded him in his tour by the residents who made the visit a very enjoyable one. Pittsfield has progressed well during the past few years until now it appears to be on the road to a more general development. On a visit to the town one is impressed with the air of neatness about the residences. Although there are only a few very costly houses, still the homes are made attractive by the application of paint and by keeping the grounds in good shape.

The streets, too, are well kept and are free from rocks and as smooth as a floor in some places. The people are not content to stand still in this respect but are continually making improvements in this line. A Bangor man will go to the town soon and concrete the sidewalk from the Pittsfield National Bank on Park street down Main street. In a drive about town a stranger is naturally first shown the Maine Central Institute, which is located on rising ground a short distance from the Maine Central depot.

MAINE CENTRAL INSTITUTE.

As the reporter was driven there the bell in the tower was tolling and the students were hastening to commence their day's studies. The Institute could not have been much better located, for it is in a position which commands quite an extended view of the surrounding country to refresh the minds of the students after weary work by a glance at nature's handiwork.

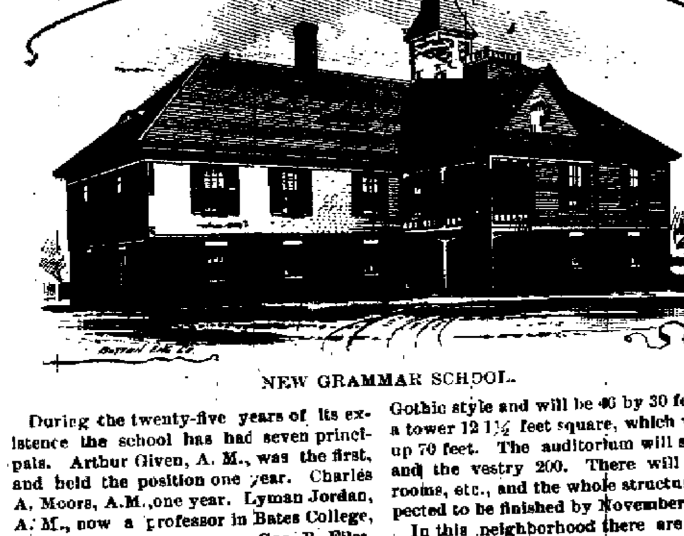

THE MAINE CENTRAL INSTITUTE.

In 1855, the question of locating a school in Pittsfield was first considered. At that time a charter was granted by the legislature, but the location of the school was left to the Board of Trustees. This Board, after a spirited canvass, gave the preference to Lewiston by a majority of one vote and the Maine State Seminary was founded. Ten years later the Maine State Seminary became Bates College and it was decided to open another school of the Seminary grade somewhere between Waterville and Bangor. Pittsfield again brought forward her claim and was this time successful.

The charter for the Maine Central Institute was granted February 1, 1866, and the first term of school was held the following autumn with about eighty students attending. The school was at this time without proper accommodations and the classes were heard in halls, private rooms and the village school house.

In 1869 the present structure was erected. It is a commodious brick building, three stories high, 118 feet long and 68 feet wide, with wings 52 feet wide.

When we understand that Kent's Hill Seminary was instituted in 1825, Westbrook in 1831, Bucksport in 1851, we can readily see that the Maine Central Institute is one of the youngest schools of Seminary grade in the State, consequently her graduates are not as old as those of the other seminaries, nor has the school a large endowment, yet its work, methods, thoroughness, and the ability of its instructors, will not suffer in comparison with the best.

NEW GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

During the twenty-five years of its existence the school has had seven principals. Arthur Given, A. M., was the first, and held the position one year. Charles A. Moors, A.M., one year. Lyman Jordan, A. M., now a professor in Bates College, held the position one year. Geo. B. Files, A.M., now principal of the Lewiston High School, four years. Kingsbury Bachelder, A. M., a graduate of Bowdoin and now professor of Greek in Hillsdale College, Mich., held the position eight years. J. H. Parsons, A. M., now principal of the Augusta High School, was also principal eight years.

The present principal, O. H. Drake, A. M., assumed the position in 1889. He is a graduate of Bates College, class of '81, and afterward took a post-graduate course of two years at Yale. He is an excellent instructor and runs the school with an even hand.

J. H. Holton, A. M., is principal of the normal department, and E. H. Bryant of the commercial. Both are highly esteemed and are regarded as fine educators.

The Institution has a campus of twenty acres of land beautifully situated on high ground. The front part of the grounds has been laid out beautifully at an expense of about $1,000, and this spring over one hundred and fifty shade trees were planted. Before another term opens it is the intention of the trustees to lay out and prepare a base ball ground and some tennis courts. When all the improvements are completed the school will have a most beautiful campus.

There are six courses of study in the Institution—a college preparatory course of three years, a ladies' collegiate, or classical, of four, a scientific of three, a normal of two, a commercial course and a course in music.

The trustees seem to aim to secure able instructors and they do thorough work, in all the different departments. Owing to the wise appropriation of the last legislature for the normal department, that course will be remodelled the coming year, and placed on a better and a strictly normal basis. It is under the supervision of the State Superintendent of Schools. Degrees are conferred by State authority on all lady graduates from the four years classical course.

The school is under the fostering care of the Free Baptists, but no sectarian teaching or influence seems to be allowed. This seems quite evident from the fact that the teachers are always selected with regard to fitness and not creed. We learn that two of the present board of teachers are Congregationalists, two are Free Baptists, one is a Calvinist Baptist and one holds the Advent belief. We doubt if there is another denominational school in the State that can show such religious liberty in its selection of teachers.

The school has had an attendance during the term just closing of about one hundred and forty, exclusive of the music department, and coming as they do from the rural population, they are a very industrious and well-behaved class of young ladies and gentlemen. The class which is about to graduate numbers forty-three—ten from the college preparatory course, six from the scientific, four from the normal and twenty-three from the commercial.

The people of Pittsfield may well congratulate themselves that such an institution of learning is established in the town. During the first three years after the school was instituted the town trebled its population.

Scholars gather there from nearly all the surrounding towns and there they purchase their books, clothing, food, etc. Their parents coming to bring and get them, often make it a point to make purchases that, were it not for the school, would drift to other centers of trade.

In conversation with some of the students, they said that they average spending for board, tuition, clothing, books and sundries, about $60 per term.

Allowing for one hundred students each term and three terms per year, it makes an aggregate of $18,000 that is brought into town by the school every year.

Since 1870 over 5,000 students have been connected with the Institution. The town of Pittsfield has furnished of this number, 1,275; Somerset county, 2,333; Penobscot 1,162; Waldo, 624; Kennebec, 153; Hancock, 104; Piscataquis, 106; Lincoln, 66; Franklin, 57; Aroostook, 62; Knox, 35; Androscoggin, 28; Cumberland, 15; York, 15; Washington, 23; Oxford, 9; Sagadahoc, 9.

Sixteen different States have had students in the school. There have also been students from New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward's Island and other parts of Canada, and from Cuba.

The school since 1870 has graduated 459, and 737 have attended the normal department. The commercial department was established three years ago, and including the present class, has graduated 36 students. The outlook for the school is regarded as very hopeful and bright.

The graduating exercises occur this week.

OTHER POINTS OF INTEREST.

After an inspection of the Institute a visit was made to other points of interest and there were many. Very near the Institution the new Free Will Baptist church is going up and this will be an important addition to the town. The foundation is now being laid, the underpinning being solid granite. Work was begun about May 25th. The church will be built in the Gothic style and will be 40 by 30 feet with a tower 12 1½ feet square, which will run up 70 feet. The auditorium will seat 300 and the vestry 200. There will be class rooms, etc., and the whole structure is expected to be finished by November.

In this neighborhood there are several new streets where only two or three years ago there were no houses. One of these is Nichols street where there are now four or five pretty little dwellings. These are of moderate cost but comfortable.

On Lancey street is the new grammar school, a cut of which appears in this article. It is certainly a credit to the town and would do honor to a much larger place than Pittsfield. The scholars have as good accommodations as could be desired and nothing is lacking in the arrangements for health and light which are admirable in every respect. There are four large class rooms in the building, which by the way is handsomely designed, and the principal's room upstairs, and large play rooms, and boiler room in the brick basement. There is a tower on the building from which floats the stars and stripes. This schoolhouse cost about $9,000. It is heated by steam. The rooms are splendidly equipped with charts, etc.

Continuing the rounds it was learned that Mr. N. L. Perkins is soon to erect a large brick block on a lot on Main street directly opposite the Lancey house. This will be quite an important addition to the street. It will be three stories in height.

One of the best buildings in town is the Union Hall structure, built of brick and occupied by the Pittsfield National Bank, the Odd Fellows and Masons, selectmen's office, the lockup, engine company and Union Hall, a very pretty hall provided with scenery and which will hold considerably over a thousand people. The town should be proud of having such a hall and doubtless is. There are other good business blocks.

Among the handsome residences may be mentioned that of Robert Dobson, Esq., head of the great firm of Robert Dobson & Co.; that of William Dobson, Esq., of the same firm; Mr. D. M. Parks' house on Main street, that of Dr. T. N. Drake and others. The interior of the house of Robert Dobson, Esq., is fitted up in an elegant manner. It is heated by steam from his mill near by and has all the modern conveniences. Other houses are well painted and present a pleasing appearance.

The Sebasticook river runs through the town giving magnificent power for the mills and being very beautiful of itself, uniting charming scenery with utility. Four iron bridges now span the water and two wooden ones, making quite a little outlay in building and repairing them. The water flowing back from the dam makes quite a large pond so the residents have a summer resort right at their own doors, as it were.

Pittsfield is the terminus of the Sebasticook and Moosehead lake railroad which does a little business on its line and gives the merchants a chance for trade with other towns on its line. Quite a large amount of business is done over the Maine Central railroad at this station.

ENTERPRISING AND PROGRESSIVE CITIZENS.

Among the enterprising and public spirited citizens may be mentioned the Dobsons, father and sons, who carry on a large business and are always doing something for the town in other ways beside extending their business and are among the leaders in every work for the public good. Then there is Dr. T. N. Drake, who owns a fine estate comprising many acres and carries on a farm and has one of the best strings of horses owned in Somerset county. And again there is Mr. W. R. Hunnewell, who has made considerable money, it is said, and who dispenses a good share of it for the public welfare. Dobson & Co. have built about twenty tenement houses for their operatives, which form quite a little village of themselves. These are near the woolen mill. They are all neat dwellings. Not far from their mill Mr. Hunnewell has bought a large tract of rough land which he is opening up into house lots. He has built at his own expense an iron bridge across the river, with solid granite abutments, the whole costing probably fully $4,000 and he is having a road built through his land giving many desirable plots on which to build which would otherwise be nothing but pasture ground. In these ways a man can show what can be done when one is actuated for the public good. He has also built ten tenement houses for the workingmen.

Dr. Drake has also laid out streets through his property and sold off lots on which to build houses. His farm extends about as far as the eye can see, so he can spare some ground.

SOME FINE BLOODED STOCK.

One of the pleasantest features of the visit to Pittsfield was a call at the fine stables of Dr. Drake a short distance out of town on the road to Canaan. There he has one of the best stables in the county and keeps some blooded stock which is much admired. He has in all 24 horses, the fastest one being Early Bird, 2.21¼. Then there is Greenfield, a fine animal which is to be trotted at Mystic Park this summer for a record. Belle Thompson is the leading brood mare. There are many fine animals beside those mentioned but lack of space forbids more extended mention. Suffice it to say that all lovers of horse flesh—and how many are there who are not counted in that number—will be well repaid by a visit to the stable. Early Bird cost $10,000 and others in the string cost $5,000. Mr. H. J. Brackett, the owner of the famous Harbinger, has also some very fine specimens of horse flesh which are coming to the front. Mr. W. S. Morrill is the owner of a number of speedy and blooded animals which are greatly admired. There are several other gentlemen who are the happy possessors of good horses and many of them are to be seen on the street while taking a gentle spin. Pittsfield has become noted for its fine horses.

SOME OF THE INDUSTRIES.

In looking over the town it is found that the most important industry is the woolen mill of Robert Dobson & Co., where over two hundred hands are given employment the year round and which adds not a little to the general prosperity of the town. Their mill is the largest in that section and is equipped with the most modern machinery throughout, run by competent hands. It is three and four stories height with a large tower on one side in where there is an automatic fire extinguisher. The buildings are well fitted but to fight fire and no serious blaze has ever occurred there owing to the precautions taken. The cloth turned out is of excellent quality and large shipments are made. The firm has built an iron bridge across the river to the tenement houses which they erected. They have a good sized office at the mill but will soon build another and larger one to accommodate their increased business demands. No passing description of their mills can do justice to the excellent management and good system in effect there. It is a wealthy concern and does much good in the town. Not far from this mill is their saw mill where lively operations are carried on. Near by is the woolen mill of Dennison Walker where over 100 hands are employed. There are several clothing manufactories employing about 100 hands, and a brickyard where half a million of brick were made last year.

A new school house has been built at this end of the town which is large and well arranged. There is considerable building going on and much repairing. The citizens are agitating the question of a system of water works and an electric light plant and this is bound to come soon. It is also likely that the water privilege above the Dobson mill will be soon utilized and more manufactories established.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

Maine Supreme Court Passes Upon An Interesting Case.

Owners of Wild Land Affected by the Court's Decision.

Right of County Commissioners to Levy Highway Expense Settled.

The Able Opinion Drawn by Chief Justice Peters.

Concurred in by Justices Libbey, Emery, Foster, Haskell, and Whitehouse.

The owners of wild lands, County Commissioners and the public generally will be interested in the following important opinion of the Supreme Court of Maine in the famous Aroostook case, so called. The able opinion is drawn by Chief Justice Peters and is concurred in by Justices Libbey, Emery, Foster, Haskell and Whitehouse. The case came before the court on appeal of the owners of wild land in Aroostook county through which passed the road from Fort Kent to New Sweden. Under the law the County Commissioners may assess the owners of wild lands through which the road passes for the expense of building the same.

The decision sustains the County Commissioners and is a very important ruling, settling a vexed question and forming a precedent for County Commissioners. The owners of wild lands always object to the building of highways through their property and the decision is therefore adverse to their claims.

The opinion follows:

Mansur v. County Commissioners.

Rescript—The statute (R. S. C. 6, Sec. 78) provides that, when a road is laid over lands not within any town or plantation required to raise money to make and repair highways, the County Commissioners shall at their first regular session thereafter assess thereon, and on adjoining townships benefited thereby, such an amount as they judge necessary for making and opening the road.

Held, That the assessments are to be made at the same regular session at which the location of the road is filed; the object of the statute being to prevent their being made at an adjourned term of such regular session.

Such regular session will be the first occurring after the road is laid over the lands. Appleton v. County Commissioners, 80 Maine, 284, explained and distinguished.

Peters, C. J. By R. S., c. 18, Sec. 41, county commissioners may lay out roads through lands not within any town or plantation required to raise money to make and repair highways, all expenses for making the same to be paid by the owners of the lands. The mode of proceeding in such a case is pointed out in succeeding sections. By R. S., c. 6, Sec. 78, provision is made for assessing the expenses upon such lands and for their collection.

The clause of the section that is questioned in this case, reads thus: "When a road is laid over lands under section forty-one of chapter eighteen, the county commissioners shall at their first regular session, thereafter, assess thereon and on adjoining townships benefited thereby, such an amount as they judge necessary for making and opening" the road.

The present proceeding is a petition for certiorari seeking to annul the record of a road established by the commissioners of Aroostook county from New Sweden to Fort Kent. There was no appeal either from the act of laying out the road or of levying the assessments. The defect alleged to exist in the proceedings is that the assessments were prematurely made. The exact question is whether "the first regular session after a road is laid over" lands, may be the same session at which a report of the establishment of the road is filed. The petitioner claims the assessments should be made at a subsequent session. The respondents claim that they should be made at the first regular session after the action of the commissioners in locating the road upon the face of the earth, which would necessarily be the session at which their report is filed. In other words, one party claims it must be the session next after the report of location, while the other claims it to be the next after the fact of location; one act being the evidence of the thing done, the other the thing itself.

The question is not free of doubt, and difficulty. Our opinion, however, is that the commissioners committed no mistake in adhering to a literal version of the text of the statute, such opinion being derived principally from an examination of the different preceding statutes out of which the present statute has descended. The history of a statute gives great aid in determining its construction.

The statute in question had its origin in section 24 chapter 118 of the laws of 1821, by which section the liability of owners was established for the expense of constructing roads across unincorporated lands. It provides that the court of sessions "may proceed to lay out such highway in the manner prescribed by law, and shall cause an assessment to be made on such tracts of land" sufficient to defray the cost of the road and other expenses. The mode of enforcing collection of the assessments is also set out in the section. At that day no appeal was allowed either from the act of laying out the road or from the assessment of benefits to land owners. It was considered as the matter of levying a tax over which the court of sessions should have exclusive authority while acting legally.

The system of appeals in such proceedings is a more modern growth. All the provisions of the act of 1821 were explicit and clear. Some difficulty has been experienced in giving a construction to later statutes on the subject, from the fact that different rights of appeal have been superadded to them which, in their practical operation, have not been entirely consistent with other provisions. Can there be any doubt that, in the act of 1821, the location of the road and the levying of the assessments were regarded as one act, one result, all the consecutive steps being parts of one adjudication?

The act of 1821 became embodied in the revised statutes of 1841 in the two following sections:

"Section 47. Whenever any highway shall be laid out by the county commissioners, through any unincorporated tract of land, the said commissioners shall decide, whether, in their opinion, such tract, or any part thereof, will be thereby enhanced in value. Said commissioners may, upon a plan of said tract, whether consisting of one or more townships, make as many divisions, as they may think equitable, conforming, as near as convenient, to known divisions, or separate ownerships; and they may assess upon each division, which they shall consider to be enhanced in value, towards the expense of making and opening such road, such sum, as, in their judgment, shall be proportionate to the value, and the benefits likely to result to it, from the establishment of such road.

Sect. 48. Said commissioners shall, thereupon, cause an assessment to be made on such tracts of land, township or plantation, or divisions thereof as aforesaid, if they see cause, at such rates per acre, as they shall judge necessary for making or opening such highway, and defraying the necessary expenses attending the same."

Can it be controverted that the various steps described in these sections were intended to comprise a single proceeding? Of course, some things precede others in the order of doing them, the assessment necessarily coming last. "Thereupon" the assessment is to be made, that is, "immediately without delay," say the lexicographers. The word implies close connection, not disconnection. No period of time is to intervene between the steps to be taken. It is not implied that any report shall be filed before the whole work is consummated.

Next comes the revision of the statutes in 1857, before which date [illegible]

MRS. BRACKETT.

ALMOST A MIRACLE!

MRS. BRACKETT IS THE WIFE OF THE REV. DAVID BRACKETT, PASTOR OF THE FIRST F. BAPTIST CHURCH OF THORNDIKE, ME., AND A LADY HIGHLY ESTEEMED BY ALL WHO KNOW HER. SHE SAYS:

Brooks, Me., Oct. 27, 1890.

Gents—When I commenced [illegible] of DANA'S SARSAPARILLA for Rheumatism, I had lost the use of my right arm. THE SHOULDER JOINT WAS VERY TENDER AND VERY STIFF. I could not sew, and could not get my hand to my head. I had a great deal of pain in the chest, especially around my lungs. My skin was yellow and rough and I felt tired all the time.

I have now taken four bottles and the pain and soreness are gone. Complexion natural, and tired feeling last learned. I sleep well nights, and the stiff joint of the shoulder is FAST RESUMING ITS NATURAL ELASTICITY. I can sew or do any work as usual.

I am still using the SARSAPARILLA and expect to entirely recover from the effects of the rheumatism that has troubled me so long. I think DANA'S SARSAPARILLA IS DEATH TO RHEUMATISM.

Yours truly,
MRS. D. BRACKETT.

MONDAY JUNE 8. 1891

To Develop Maine.

As the saying is the people of Patten know a good thing when they see it The despatch which we publish in our telegraph columns this morning announces the gratifying fact that at the meeting called for that purpose, Saturday, the people unanimously voted to subscribe $14,500 to the preferred stock of the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad That is a liberal subscription for the town of Patten, it being the constitutional limit, but the people did not even rest there They want this railroad, knowing that it means a great deal to Patten in the future, hence the total was brought up to $20,000 by private subscriptions This is a worthy response from the town of Patten to Aroostook's grand subscription in aid of the project and the action serves to show how thoroughly in earnest the people are in this matter The same generous support from Bangor and the indications are that it will be forthcoming, will ensure the commencement of the work of construction just as soon as the working plans are ready It will be a great day for Bangor when it secures direct communication with the Garden of the East

Indeed the future is full of brilliant promise for the State in general and the eastern portion in particular While the people of Aroostook and Penobscot are busily engaged in the work of securing additional railroad facilities the people of Washington are also bending their energies in the same direction The county has already voted generous aid to the Shore Line and the prospects for that much needed road are now very encouraging Commenting upon the meeting of the stockholders the Machias Republican says

At last it looks as though the ardent desire for a railroad so long entertained by the people of Washington county is about to be gratified At all events the enterprise is now well launched and it is within the strong probabilities, to say the least that it will be a complete success within the next two years

The meeting at Libby Hall was a public one and there was present some three hundred delegates from the various towns throughout the county who had assembled to confer with the directors and discuss the all important question of the location of the road After the election a recess was taken for the purpose of hearing from the delegates and several hearty and enthusiastic speeches were made

Notwithstanding it was long past the dinner hour when the delegates finished, loud cries were made for Col Greene and as he arose to speak three rousing cheers were given for the man who has done so much to bring the railroad project so near success This spontaneous tribute paid him by the assembled delegates was a fitting compliment to his patience and indomitable perseverance in the good work His speech was full of hope and encouragement and he ventured the prediction that within two years two trains a day each way will pass through Machias

In the afternoon the directors held a conference and it is understood they decided to arrange for a determination of the location of the road at an early day after which the contract for construction will be awarded as soon as possible May God speed the day

Sir John Macdonald

When the Whig went to press Saturday morning the latest news from the bedside of Sir John Macdonald was to the effect that he was not expected to live through the night, as he had been sinking gradually for some time The end did not come however until Saturday evening, when Canada's Premier breathed his last For a great many years Sir John has been a leading and imposing figure in Canadian affairs and the effect of his death upon the political future of the Dominion is a question that is not easily forecast

Born January 11 1815, in Glasgow Scotland Sir John was therefore seventy-six years old at the time of his death. His father moved to Canada when the boy was five years old and settled in Kingston After obtaining his education young Macdonald entered the legal profession In 1844 he was elected to the Assembly for Kingston and has been in Parliament ever since He has held office almost continuously since 1847—excepting of course the five years of Sir Alexander Mackenzie's Liberal rule which terminated in 1878 When he entered politics Quebec and Ontario were in an union, Ontario being known as Canada West and Quebec as Canada East His first position of real eminence was when in 1854 he became Attorney General for Canada West Sir John was at the head of affairs in the old Province of Canada until the time of confederation when he became an important factor in the life of all the provinces Indeed his political career is essentially the history of Canada No man in the Dominion has been so closely identified with Canadian affairs The scheme of confederation which amalgamated independent provinces into one great nationality was one of the great achievements of Sir John The construction of the Canadian Pacific railway from the Atlantic to the Pacific might have proved a colossal failure with any other than Sir John at the back of the enterprise. He has served under eight governors-general [viz, Elgin, Head, Monck, Lisgar, Dufferin Lorne, Lansdowne and Stanley of Preston Sir John was knighted in 1867, on the day of confederation, and his patent of knighthood was enlarged to that of Grand Cross of the Bath in 1884 He is also a Knight Grand Cross of the Royal Order of Isabella the Catholic of Spain He has the degree of D. C. L. from Oxford, as well as from several Canadian universities. He is a member of the Queen's privy council in England—an honor that is, we believe, unique, as it is doubtful if it has been conferred on any other colonist.

He lost his first wife, Isabella Clark, a Scottish lady, in 1856 and married again, 11 years later, Susan Agnes Bernard, a daughter of the late Hon T J. Bernard, a member of the privy council of Jamaica.

To this fortunate match he owed much. She was his devoted companion, and possessed a mind but little inferior to his own in power. Earnscliffe, the home of Sir John A. Macdonald, is delightfully situated on the Ottawa river. The lawn in front of the house is level and is always kept in excellent order. To the rear of the grounds are a mass of jagged rocks as wild and uncanny as the ghost haunts of Scottish shores so graphically depicted in the Waverly novels. There is a high board fence along the cliff, running parallel to the river, upon which Sir John had displayed a sign in French and English warning the shanty men not to tie up their boats on his fence. Earnscliffe is an out of the way place, and this fact made the

Portable Cooking Range,

For Wood or Coal.

The Clarion Ranges have been before the public 16 years and they have grown more popular each year until to-day it stands at the head of all others.

Please read what some of the leading dealers say about this celebrated Range

Messrs Damon & Sleeper of Lynn Mass. say We have sold several hundred Clarion Ranges in the past five years and have as yet to find a case where one failed to work satisfactorily. They are splendid bakers No other Ranges in these parts can hold a candle to it

The Kohler Furnace and Steam Heating Co, of Boston, say We have sold between four and five hundred Clarion Ranges to the best people in Boston, who pronounced them as being the most economical and quickest baking Range that they ever used

Messrs A L & E. F Goss of Lewiston, say, "We have sold at retail of the Clarion, New Clarion, Royal Clarion and Gold Clarion Ranges, not less than four thousand (4,000) and they have always given entire satisfaction."

Another remarkable fact is that the good old State of Maine, whose motto is, "We Lead," has produced the best cooking range in the market—this is a point we are proud of

Messrs Foss & Crockett of Dexter, say "We sold over seven hundred (700) Clarion Ranges. No other Range can fill its place for its unrivalled qualities No other Manufacturer has ever made a Range to equal the Clarion, and why is a conundrum we have never comprehended"

Please send to us for our 32 page Book of Testimonials of the Clarion Ranges.

EXCITEMENT IN CHILI.

American Admiral Will Not Allow Itata to Discharge Arms.

The Chilian Revolutionists Losing Ground Rapidly.

IQUIQUE, Chili, June 7. There is great excitement here over the decision of the American admiral to take the Itata without allowing the discharge of her arms and ammunition.

The press is very bitter and considers the United States the recognized cradle of republican ideas, commits a grave error in thus indirectly assisting the dictator.

Revolution Playing Out.

PARIS, June 7. The Chilian Legation has received an official note issued at Santiago by the so called delegation of Congress, representing that the revolution is without moral authority. The insurgents of Tarapaca lack authority and have no means with which to make an expedition into the populous part of Chili.

The army of the government numbers 40 soldiers and 10,000 gendarmes, well equipped and disciplined.

The revolutionary army consists of only 5,000 demoralized men.

The constitutional Congress, the note adds, approved the economic laws, furnishing the government with ample resources.

She Landed Rifles and Supplies.

STREETS OF LONDON

Quiet, Except Strikes.' Disturbances—The 'Bus Strike.

LONDON, June 7. The thoroughfares of London were strangely silent to-day, owing to the strike of omnibus drivers. There was a plentiful supply of cabs, however.

The morning saw all the 'bus yards strongly guarded by the police. About 20 vehicles of the Road Car Company and a few of the General Omnibus Company ventured out with "blackleg" drivers.

Many of these drivers, after experiencing the taunts and jeers of the strikers, abandoned the attempt after the first journey.

At 11 a. m. the Road Car Company called in all the cars, leaving traffic to occasional pirates' who, cheered by the strikers, did a good business at enhanced fares. The railways, river boats and cabs reaped the benefit of the strike.

The strikers were generally orderly.

At Charing Cross, in the presence of 1,000 cheering onlookers, John Burns stoutly resisted violent attempts of a posse of police to arrest him on top of a road car where he was trying to persuade the police not to interfere with a driver working without a license.

On the police desisting from their violent efforts Burns followed them quietly to the station, where he was charged with ... mid tion.

Some of the strikers cut the traces of ... busses at Marble Arch and overturned them after inviting the passengers to descend.

Three strikers concerned were arrested.

The men have abandoned the demand for an increase of wages for the present. The Road Car Company is willing to concede 12 hours and it is probable a settlement will be effected to-morrow.

BOTH POISONED.

Death Lingered in the Rum Bottle.

NEW YORK, June 6. Karl Syversten, the Norwegian sailor, and Emma Wolf, who were taken unconscious from the Stavengerin House, at 97 Cherry street, on Wednesday night, and who died yesterday in the Chambers street Hospital, without having recovered consciousness, died from the effects of something besides bad rum, in all likelihood, a poison that had been placed in the liquor the man and woman drank.

Coroner Levy began his investigations in the case to-day. None of the witnesses explained who washed the whiskey bottle or why it had been found necessary to wash it. In fact none of them gave any testimony that would be at all valuable in clearing up the mystery.

Suicide of a Rochester, N. Y. Man.

BARDSLEY'S AFFAIRS.

Experts Investigating His Affairs.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 7. It is said the experts examining Bardsley's affairs have in possession all his check books, cancelled checks and private accounts and will be able to trace all the missing State and city funds.

The charge of perjury in violating his oath of office will be dropped.

No record of his having been sworn in can be found in the prothonotary office, where it should have been on file had he been sworn.

The only oath he took was with reference to his duties toward the State under the act of assembly of 1854. This act was nullified by the new charter under which the municipality is now in operation. The oath taken is therefore void.

THE CENSUS OFFICE.

A Lack of Funds to Run It.

WASHINGTON, June 7. There is consternation in the various branches of the census office, growing out of the fact that the money appropriated to carry on the work is running so low that it has become necessary to reduce the force.

It is hinted that between now and July 1st the force is to be reduced at least one thousand, which takes in a large number of the original appointees, nearly all of whom were recently given a three months appointment.

This information was imparted yesterday by Chief Clerk Childs on being asked to transfer a number of clerks to the regular list or reappoint them for another three months term.

This will delay the work of the office considerably and will necessitate an extra appropriation to complete it.

RAILROAD NEWS.

VIOLENT EARTHQUAKE SHOCKS.

Several Italian Cities Shaken Up and Much Damaged.

A Number of Lives Lost and Several People Injured.

ROME, June 7. A part of Tuscany was visited early this morning by repeated earthquake shocks.

Shocks were felt at Venice and Milan. The centre of the disturbance was Verona. A subterranean noise was heard like the roar of artillery, followed by three strong shocks. The inhabitants rushed into the streets in terror.

At Marcenigo three persons were killed and at Badia Calavena seventeen were badly injured by the falling houses and chimneys.

At the latter place another shock was felt at six o'clock this morning and much additional damage was done. The movements were undulating in character and extending more or less over the whole of North Italy.

A DRAMATIC INCIDENT.

Invalid Woman Witness Faints at Sight of a Murderer.

NEW YORK, June 6. A dramatic incident occurred to-day when Henry C. Fanning, the murderer of Mrs. Emily Taylor, was taken to the bedside of Mrs. McCarthy, the friend of the murdered woman, while two assistant district attorneys listened to the invalid woman's statement.

This step was necessary as Mrs. McCarthy could not be taken to court and the law requires the presence of the accused at the examination of all witnesses.

When Fanning was brought into the sick chamber Mrs. McCarthy fainted.

After she recovered sufficiently to tell her story she said Mrs. Taylor had often told her she feared Fanning more than the devil. Mrs. Taylor lived with her many months.

A few weeks before she was murdered she returned home with several wounds on her head, made by Fanning in attempting to brain her with a stone. At the time they were in Central Park and if it had not been for her quickness in escaping he would have accomplished his purpose. On the night she was murdered, she kissed Mrs. McCarthy as she was leaving the house to meet Fanning, saying she might not see her again.

TARIFF WORKINGS.

The Investigation of the Committee.

NEW YORK, June 6. The United States Senate sub-committee on the tariff, which has been engaged here during the past week formulating plans for an inquiry into wholesale prices, has adjourned for the summer.

No investigations have as yet been undertaken. During the summer the details of the work, as laid out by the committee, will remain in charge of Carroll D. Wright, Mr. Reis and Col. Grosvenor. Each of these gentlemen will have a department or quota of the work to look after.

Some time in July Senators Aldrich and Carlisle will return to the city to inquire into the progress of the work and arrange some little preliminaries prior to the meeting of the full sub-committee, which will take place in the middle of September. The committee will then make public the schedules of wholesale and retail prices which have been already prepared, and proceed to earnest work.

HE LED A DUAL LIFE.

Leading Baltimore Capitalist Found to Be Defaulter.

The Majority of His Victims Poor People of the City.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 6. Three days ago, Jacob Bonnet, a leading German capitalist, and one of the best-known men in the city, was found dead in Druid Hill Park. He had killed himself with laudanum.

His family attributed the suicide to ill health, but within one day after his death there were reports of a defalcation, and a hasty investigation proved that Bonnet had gotten away with a considerable amount. Twenty thousand dollars, it was then thought, would cover the shortage, but the receivers appointed by the court yesterday announce to-day that, after a cursory examination, they find a deficiency of $100,000, and they expect it will reach nearly twice that amount.

Among the victims, of whom there are about 100, are capitalists, lawyers, merchants and working people, whose individual losses range all the way from $3,000 to $5,000. The majority are poor people, who could ill afford to lose the money.

Bonnet's peculations date back nearly 10 years, and soon after he became connected with the Rothschild building associations. The first of the associations began over a quarter of a century ago. Nearly every year a new one was started, separate and distinct from the others. From time to time the periods of their incorporation ran out, and to-day there are but two in existence, known respectively as No. 19 and 20.

It Was Customary

to let the same officers hold over from one association to the other. So satisfactorily were the associations conducted, and so promptly were all the claims paid, that no one suspected there would be trouble as long as Bonnet was interested in the management. He was a strict church member and experienced little trouble in making himself solid.

Germans in the eastern section were glad to join and placed their weekly savings in Bonnet's hands. The latter was nominally the secretary of the association, but really the entire corporation. The president and treasurer were of his own selection, and these, like the depositors, placed all confidence in "Honest Jacob."

So year in and year out money came in and went out. At first the secretary gave receipts and turned the money into the treasurer's hands, but after a time this was stopped. Bonnet explaining that this was a useless proceeding, causing much trouble, and that he could better attend to the financial affairs by retaining the money. The unsuspecting treasurer consented, and so, without giving bond for a dollar, the secretary receiving and disbursing.

Without consulting any of the officers he would make loans, mortgages, etc., some of which were recorded and others were not. No one ever looked at the books or examined the accounts. Everybody trusted Bonnet implicitly, and as the years went by his reputation for honesty and sagacity increased.

Meanwhile the Secretary was Leading a dual life. Down town he was an Orthodox Christian; up town he was one of the boys. He spent money freely and now and then bucked the tiger. Lottery was his hobby. He was interested not only in drawings in this country, but in those in Europe as well. It is also intimated that a woman, not of his household profited by his ill gotten gains.

He kept this up for years and yet retained the confidence of everybody. Week in and week out he appeared at his desk and took in the money of the stockholders. Finally, this did not meet his demands and he began borrowing.

His plan was simple. He used the names of the associations, thereby making them liable. As the receiver explained it, he would draw up notes at pleasure and get Samuel, the president, and Thurman, who acted as treasurer, to sign them. They never asked any questions and invariably affixed their names. Of course, capitalists were glad to make the investment.

When the notes came due he paid the interest and had them renewed. On the day he committed suicide he borrowed $1400, and even now no one knows what became of the money. There were also many working people whom he inveigled into loaning him money and they lose every dollar.

The assets, which consist of mortgages issued on weekly payments, and a farm, will not exceed $3000.

Mr. Martin Meierdinck of the German American Bank was appointed receiver by the court, and all day his house has been thronged by poor people, who ask after their money.

One of the victims is a woman named Steele, whose husband lost $20,000 through a failure and took to drinking. This killed him. His widow opened a saloon and saved $2,000. She explained that she was afraid to marry lest a husband might spend the money, so she intrusted it to Bonnet. Now she is penniless. A washerwoman loses $700, her savings for ten years. One old man gave Bonnet $100, which money was to bury him. And so a number of cases might be cited.

Bonnet was 62 years old. He leaves a widow and family.

LARGEST EVER KNOWN.

WEATHER AND CROPS.

The Reports From All Over the Country.

WASHINGTON, June 6. The weather crop bulletin issued by the signal office says:

The week has been warm in all districts east of the Mississippi river, except in the lake region and New England. There has been a continued deficiency of rainfall in the Gulf States during the week, amounting to one inch or more at all stations.

Abundant rains have fallen in all other districts east of the Rocky Mountains, though there has been a slight deficiency in the middle Mississippi valley, in New England, and on the Atlantic coast.

Copious rains in the wheat regions of the Northwest have greatly benefited crops during the past week; a slight lack of sunshine is reported, but prospects are generally better than at a corresponding date last year.

In the Missouri valley the partial drought has been entirely relieved by the abundant rains. Corn is still quite backward, and that which was injured by cut worms has been replanted.

In the upper lake region heavy rains have materially improved crops, though a little more would be beneficial in the interior of Wisconsin.

Slight damage by hail is reported in the southern counties of Wisconsin, and by cut worms in Michigan.

In Arkansas and Texas corn is suffering for rain, except in western Arkansas, where crops are in fine condition. The cotton crop is slightly deficient. The wheat harvest in Texas is under good headway.

Crop conditions are somewhat improved in Kentucky, but more rain is needed, oats, corn and grass suffering most; wheat somewhat improving; tobacco plants held back by lack of rain.

Serious Drought

is reported from Tennessee, though the wheat harvest promises a good yield; late cotton almost a failure; outlook rather gloomy.

Mississippi reports serious drought, which will probably be relieved by showers promised to-day.

In Alabama the crops are generally in fine condition, but rain is very much needed in some sections; oats especially suffering from drought.

In North Carolina and South Carolina favorable conditions for crops have prevailed during the week. Severe storms and hail have been injurious in a few localities; cotton, while improved, is still quite backward; oat harvest has begun; general outlook very favorable.

In New York, Pennsylvania and Virginia fruit prospects are excellent, rains have been very beneficial, though corn is still backward in Pennsylvania.

In New Jersey conditions are slightly more favorable, but the continued deficiency of rainfall is seriously affecting all crops, especially strawberries, early

LATE CANADIAN PREMIER.

Death of Sir John Macdonald at His Home.

Close of a Long and Distinguished Public Career.

OTTAWA, Ont., June 6. Sir John Macdonald passed away at his home, Earnscliffe, at 10.30 o'clock to-night, after a long and trying illness.

At yesterday's consultation the doctors found that Sir John's feet were perfectly numb, and predicted that he had but few hours to live.

City in Mourning.

OTTAWA, June 7. Ottawa is a city of mourning to-day and everywhere signs of general sorrow are felt at the loss the nation has sustained in the death of Sir John Macdonald, one of her greatest sons.

Flags are flying at half mast from the Parliament and other public buildings and many private houses, some of which are draped with crape.

The United States flag is floating at half mast over the United States Consulate.

The remains of the dead leader were embalmed this morning.

The official programme of the funeral arrangements is that the body will be privately moved from Earnscliffe to the Parliament buildings and will lie in state from Tuesday at 10 A. M. until the hour of the funeral of state. The funeral will leave the Parliament buildings at 1 P. M., Wednesday, for St. Alban's church, thence to the Canadian Pacific railway station, whence the body will be conveyed to Kingston.

The body will lie in state at City Hall, Kingston, until Thursday noon, when the interment will take place.

In every church in the city to-day lengthy references were made to the deceased statesman. Arrangements have been made to fire minute guns in every city in Canada on Wednesday during the progress of the funeral.

The ex-Cabinet Ministers met this afternoon, when Sir John Thompson arrived from Montreal, and decided to give the Premier a State funeral. Lady Macdonald gave her consent to this arrangement.

The Governor General has not yet sent for any of Sir John's colleagues to form a ministry.

A Complicated Horse Case.

A New Hampshire gentleman, a judge, and Detective Ira W. True passed through the city Saturday from Bar Harbor, where they have been on business which will result in restoring to the judge his horse. Three years ago his horse, which he valued at $1,000, was stolen from him, and until recently there has been no trace of the animal.

With the assistance of Detective True the horse was finally located in Bar Harbor and the owner and the detective went there and identified the animal. The horse has been owned by several parties in this city, he having been sold and "swapped" in perfect good faith, nobody here knowing that he was stolen property. As so many have been interested in the animal, the case promises to be quite a complicated one.

A surprise party was given in honor of A. C. Flint, Esq., Friday evening at his residence on Ohio street, the occasion being his seventy-second birthday. There was a large number present, and the evening was very enjoyably passed. Mr. Flint was wished many happy returns of the occasion.

The vesper service at the Hammond street church yesterday afternoon was largely attended and the exercises were of a very interesting order. The music was furnished by the church choir and the different selections were well rendered. Prof. F. B. Denio delivered an able address, which was given close attention.

Salmon are coming into the market from the down river weirs in plenteous quantities and the price is consequently growing lower. The steamer Welcome, which runs down river each day, visiting all the weirs, brings a very large number of the fish. The weirs will doubtless prove quite profitable for their owners this year.

The delegates from this city and vicinity who attended the Universalist convention at Portland have returned, and they are well satisfied with the results of the meeting. One hundred and forty-five delegates and pastors, representing thirty-five parishes, were present. The programme was an interesting one and many able speakers were heard during the progress of the convention.

The annual convention of the Maine Episcopal Diocese will be held in St. Luke's cathedral, Portland, to-morrow and Wednesday. The annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will occur to-morrow. St. John's church of this city will be represented at the convention by Rev. and Mrs. John McGaw Foster, Gen. and Mrs. Joseph S. Smith, and Mrs. N. H. Dillingham, who leave to-day.

Amateur photography is on the increase in this city, and the camera enthusiast is frequently encountered. Special occasions like the trades procession Merchants' Week bring them out in large numbers. Several different kinds of cameras are in use here, and the amateur artists obtain first rate pictures in many instances. It is an interesting and profitable amusement, as all find who have tried it.

The Bangor Board of Trade and the committees who had charge of the arrangements for Merchants' Week will hold a special meeting this afternoon at three o'clock at the Common Council room to settle up all business connected with that event. All outstanding bills should be presented to John S. Jenness, treasurer of the Merchants' Week committee, before 2 P. M. to-day, that they may be paid.

Many are intending to be present at the strawberry festival to be given to-morrow evening at the Columbia street Baptist church vestry as a benefit to "In-As-Much" Circle of King's Daughters, and a pleasant programme has been arranged for the occasion. At 5.30 refreshments, including strawberries and cream, will be served, and afterwards a musical and literary programme will be given. Some of the best talent in the city will participate.

The members of Triumph Lodge, I. O. G. T., held a most enjoyable sociable at their hall Saturday evening. It concluded the series of sociables of the season. The programme was as follows: Harmonica solo, B. E. Whitten; duet, Messrs. Grover and Dearborn; solo, Fred Pierce; harmonica solo, B. E. Whitten: duet, Messrs. As this is the last meeting in the old rooms, doubtless there will be a full attendance. Refreshments will be served.

GOOD TEMPLARS. J. H. Hamilton organized a Good Templars lodge at Brownville June 1st. Piscataquis District Lodge was held at Milo June 2d, and was the largest ever held in the county. Twenty-four took the District Lodge degree. A bountiful dinner and supper were furnished by Constantia lodge, of Milo. A public meeting was held in the evening, which was largely attended. The meeting was addressed by J. H. Hamilton, Mrs. E. E. Cain and Mrs. L. J. Wheelden and the several pastors in the village.

Yesterday was Floral Sunday for jails, prisons and almshouses all over the country and it was appropriately observed by the Woman's Crusade. In the morning every prisoner at the jail was presented with a beautiful bouquet which contained a verse of scripture. In the evening the meeting at the Crusade Parlors, on Franklin street, was very largely attended and much interest was taken in the services. The rooms were handsomely decorated with flowers and wore an added appearance of attractiveness. There were five signers to the pledge.

It has been rather cold at Moosehead Lake for the trout fishing, but warmer weather may be expected now and the fishermen will be enabled to try their luck in comfort. Several parties of devotees of the rod have gone through the city recently from Boston, New York and Philadelphia on their way to the lake after trout, and other parties which have been there on allotted time have returned. The fish have taken the hook quite well, it is reported, and the fishing will continue to grow better as the summer advances. Many of the steamers have been utilized by the fishermen who have taken long cruises about the lake in search of the trout.

Sawyer rendered several selections in a very skillful manner.

The annual meeting of the Penobscot Congregational Conference, meets at Medway, commencing this evening at seven o'clock and closing Tuesday evening. By taking the railroad train at 12.20 P. M. today for Mattawamkeag, free conveyance will be secured from thence to Medway. There will be one fare for the round trip by railroad. The ordination of Mr. Wm. B. The fishing craft which make an annual trip from Bucksport to the Grand Banks have all taken their departure, to take their chances with the fish which are sometimes taken in large quantities under favorable circumstances, and at other times do not give the fishermen a very profitable return for the money invested. Last year was about on the average and the catch would have been a large one had it not been for the frequent storms which delayed the fishing during the latter part of the work. The fishermen are hoping for better results this year and have gone supplied with all the necessities for taking care of all the fish that may be hooked.

Several young men indulged in a free fight about midnight Saturday on a street near the Hampden road, at the lower end, and made considerable of a disturbance for a time. Officer Gallagher was soon on the scene and when he was seen approaching the crowd quickly scattered. The two principal combatants made a lively sprint around a house which they entered, with the officer a good second. His grip was soon on them and they, with Officers Loftus, Barnes and Jacobs, who had arrived, started for the station, which they reached in good time, the walking being uncommonly good. The fellows arrested bear the names of McQuiggan and Jones. Other arrests will probably follow.

Mr. Thomas White is to add to the interest of the big firemen's tournament to occur in this city July 15th by establishing a voting contest, one vote being allowed for every 25 cents worth of goods, exclusive of sugar, purchased at his store. The first prize will be a very handsome silk banner worth $150, secured from the Pettibone Manufacturing Company, of Cincinnati, through James A. Robinson & Son. The second prize will be a finely engraved silver trumpet, and the third a costly gold watch to the one who deposits the largest number of votes. It is probable that this excellent opportunity to gain the valuable prizes will not be neglected, and that the voting will be spirited.

Prof. Charles E. Adams, of this city, instructor in physical culture at Rutgers College, and Prof. Frank N. Whittier, of Bowdoin College, who are traveling in Europe, while in Stockholm recently attended the big athletic tournament. Teams were present from different parts of Sweden, Norway and England, and it was one of the great events of the year. The team making the best record was from a small town in Norway, and it was composed of forty athletes of a high order. One particularly noticeable feature of their work was the fact that every man on the team did the giants' swing, the most difficult feat on the horizontal bar, and also the most skillful tricks on the parallel bars. The tournament was a great success and had a large number of entries.

The sixty-sixth annual meeting of the General Conference of the Congregational churches in Maine will be held at Waterville, commencing on Tuesday, June 16, at 10.30 A. M., and closing on Thursday afternoon. During the week the anniversaries of the Maine Missionary Society, the Maine Congregational Charitable Society and the Maine Branch of the American College and Education Society will be held. Rev. Dwight M. Pratt, of Portland, preaches the opening sermon at 2 P. M. Tuesday. Prof. W. S. Pratt, of Hartford Seminary will give on Thursday at 10 A. M. his interesting address on music as a part of public worship. In addition to speakers from our own State there will also be present from abroad, Rev. L. H. Cobb, D. D., of New York, Rev. B. Gutterson, of India, Rev. W. G. Puddefoot, of Boston, Rev. E. A. Dunning, of Boston, and others.

BASE BALL.

Bates, 15; Maine State College, 9.

The championship in the M. S. C.-Bates series of games was settled Saturday, when the Bates won by a score of 15 to 9. They have thus taken three of the five games to be played, the series now standing—Bates won 3 and M. S. C. won 1. The principal cause of defeat was the ragged fielding by the M. S. C.'s, although the timely batting of the Bates men aided in piling up the runs. Following is the score:

We have received the following newspaper account of the death in San Jose, Cal., May 3d. of Robert Haeneke, who was formerly a member of Co. K, 7th Maine Regiment, with which he served through the war:

Robert Haeneke, a butcher in East San Jose, was found dead in his room on Clay street, near Santa Clara street, yesterday afternoon, about 1 o'clock. Coroner Secord was notified soon afterward.

The deceased was 60 years old and a native of Germany. He is said to have come ...

THE ORONO RACES.

Park of the Orono Trotting Association Opened Saturday.

Saturday was a favorable day for the opening of the new park of the Orono Trotting Association as the weather was pleasant and quite warm, and the ceremony was performed in a most successful manner. There was a large attendance and much interest was taken in the trotting.

The park has a half mile track, which has recently been completed, and while it is at present a little hard, it will soon be in the best possible condition. It will be one of the best tracks in the State, and is easy of access from the town.

The judges were Messrs. Henry A. Pratt and C. A. Cushman of Old Town, and Elgin A. Greenleaf, of this city, who acted as starter.

There were six starters in the 2.33 class the first race. The first heat was won by Naumkeag without difficulty, but Black Crook was on his mettle and pressed Naumkeag in the remaining heats. The time was good considering the state of the track.

Commencement Concert.

The Maine State College commencement concert will occur in this city, at the Opera House, on Thursday evening, June 2?, and is expected to be the event of the season in that line. The Temple Quartette of Boston; Mr. Alfred De Seve, the widely known violinist; and Miss Gertrude Edmunds, the contralto of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be the artists that will appear on that occasion. This will ensure a most delightful event and the house will doubtless be large. Tickets will be on sale on and after June 19th, at the box office and at Orono post-office and at Folsom's store, Old Town.

Athletic Association in Prospect.

The young men who were members of Mr. F. H. Dodge's school of physical culture are now making arrangements for forming an athletic association, and a paper is in circulation among them for the purpose of seeing if enough money could be raised to purchase the outfit. The paper has been very freely signed, and it is assured that an association will be formed. A meeting will be held Wednesday evening at the "gym" when the association will be organized, and officers elected. The membership will be limited to one hundred. Mr. Dodge, who has gone to Chicago to take charge of the Athenæum, had a "gym" which was well fitted up with a large amount of apparatus, and it is probable that the young men who have become in the habit of utilizing it, will desire to retain such convenient facilities.

Children's Day.

Children's Day was observed yesterday at the Essex street Free Baptist church in an extremely interesting and appropriate manner. The altar was beautifully decorated with flowers, plants and evergreen, and the arrangement was very tasteful. In the morning, the pastor, Rev. C. E. Mason, preached a very interesting illustrated sermon. In the evening a concert was given. There was a very large attendance, the church being completely filled. The following programme was very successfully given: Organ voluntary; hymn, by congregation; responsive reading, Mrs. Preble's class; invocation, pastor; singing, by school; responsive reading, Mrs. B. Lambert's class; recitation, "Our Day," Bertie Mills; recitation, Lottie Lawrence; recitation, Aggie Rattray; recitation, Lizzie Scott; singing, three little children; responsive reading, Mrs. Williams' class, reading, Miss Winnie French; recitation, Gracie Field Coombs; recitation, Freddie Mills; recitation, Eliza Jenkins; "A Children's Sermon, Vallie Coullard; singing, by school; responsive reading, F. Bangor Members of Bowdoin's Senior Class.

In an extended article upon the graduating classes of the Maine colleges the Lewiston Journal has the following in relation to the Bowdoin class of '91, and the Bangor members:

The senior class at Bowdoin has 53 members and is not only the largest class in college, but is one of the largest which ever graduated from the institution. It has, in the course of its history, had sixty members, but there have been two deaths in the class; one left to go to West Point and one went to Wesleyan, while ill-health and other causes have compelled three others to leave college.

Thomas Stone Burr, managing editor of the Orient and member of Bugle Board, will probably enter journalism.

John Mason Hastings intends to study medicine next year.

Ralph Hudson Hunt will attend the medical school next year probably.

Interesting Lectures.

A union meeting of all the Sunday schools of the city was held yesterday afternoon at three o'clock at the Central church for young people how important it was to begin young in the temperance path.

In the evening at 7.30, Miss Kimball spoke in the Columbia street Baptist church, and her address was adapted to older people, and parents particularly. She laid stress upon the importance of educating children in temperance principles, as in that way public sentiment would be educated, and she also referred to the good results of the enforcement of the prohibitory law in Portland.

The address was of much excellence and many practical ideas were advanced which cannot fail to do much good in the future. There was a large audience present and all were much interested in the remarks.

"He's filing saws again," complained a disgusted boarder of his neighbor, who used to clear his head and throat every morning. Rather than lose two good boarders, Mr. Landlord cured the invalid by a bottle of Adamson's Botanic Cough Balsam.

BEECHAM'S PILLS ACT LIKE MAGIC
ON A WEAK STOMACH. 25 Cents a Box. OF ALL DRUGGISTS.

There's a good deal of guarantee business in the store keeping of to-day. It's too excessive. Or too reluctant. Half the time it means nothing. Words—only words.

This offer to refund the money, or to pay a reward, is made under the hope that you won't want your money back, and that you won't claim the reward. Of course.

So, whoever is honest in making it and works—not on his own reputation alone, but through the local dealer whom you know must have something he has faith in back of the guarantee. The business wouldn't stand a year without it.

What is lacking is confidence. Back of that, what is lacking is that clear honesty which is above the "average practice."

Dr. Pierce's medicines are guaranteed to accomplish what they are intended to do, and their makers give the money back if the result isn't apparent.

Doesn't it strike you that a medicine which the makers have so much confidence in, is the medicine for you?

MISSING MATCHES

CHAPTER XVII.
DRIVING A BARGAIN.

"I am ... glad to see you, Count de Lisle," she said.

Within an hour from the time when Olympia Raven and the Count de Lisle should have been made man and wife all the detective skill available in New York was engaged in searching for the bride. Not only that, but men were stationed at every possible point of exit from the city; telegrams were sent to every village, town and city within a thousand miles; every steamer, vessel and vehicle leaving or about to leave New York was searched. In the course of a day or two thousands of photographs of the missing girl were distributed in all directions over the country and were posted up at every street corner, in every church, in every place of amusement in the city. Accompanying them was an offer of a reward that has probably never been paralleled in the history of the world. One million dollars ... for information that would lead to the recovery of Olympia Raven, or, of her body, if she were dead; and ten million dollars to any one who would bring her to her friends unharmed in health and limb. Meanwhile the papers devoted columns to the discussion of the matter; it was talked of in every household in the United States; long cablegrams on the subject were sent to Europe, and it is not too much to say that by the end of a week nearly every inhabitant of the civilized world had heard the name of Olympia Raven and knew something of her history.

It seemed impossible that all this should fail to bring some news of her; and yet so much the more did it seem so. How could a person—and a girl so striking, beauty that—vanish so utterly and so suddenly that no one of the millions of her fellow creatures ... should ... stimulated by the promise of wealth ... unsought ... single ... ? ... no one seen her ... Had no one received her where she was going ... ? ... the only ... could be ... to that spot. If she had been finally dealt with, was there no accomplice whose ... would tempt him to open his lips? Be that as it might, no syllable of news was received. If Olympia had gone out of existence like the flame of a candle, she could not have left less trace behind her. The whole world had been asked where she was, and ... had ... ... able to ... reply.

Early in the proceedings Tom Buttrick had ... up his intention to ... and his investigations had ended in his ... the town ... Philadelphia. When ... was in ... ... the hotel at which ... was staying, ... that ... had been ... ... of April 0— twelve ... Olympia disappeared. ... his proper senses ... little ... for himself. He intimated that drink had been his demon from the beginning and that an occasional spree he must have. When questioned as to Olympia he merely shook his head and remarked that he was sorry for the count. Tell him, he added, that he will never see me again. I have lived a decent life longer than I ever did before, and I am tired of it. I shall relapse into the tramp I was when he found me. I followed him up to the altar, now I shall follow my own nose to the devil, and that will be my address. Saying which this enigmatical personage turned over in his bed and went to sleep.

Meanwhile it had not escaped the count that if Sallie Matchin had wished to avenge herself upon him in the most effective manner conceivable, she could not have hit upon a method so effective as this. No doubt she would willingly have spirited Olympia away had she been able to do so, but it was impossible to imagine how she could find the means. Investigation showed that no person had been admitted to the house during the period between ten and eleven o'clock on the first of May. Olympia must therefore have gone forth of her own volition. Nor was it creditable to suppose her to have intended going to the church, she could have been waylaid upon the way thither. The distance was but a quarter of a mile; the sun was shining, the avenue was full of people. So the idea was not to be entertained; and yet it was just as difficult to suppose that the girl had hidden herself away. Only downright insanity could account for her doing such a thing, and even assuming that she had done it, some one must be aware of the fact and the reward that had been offered would long since have led to her bringing back.

He was obliged, consequently, to acquit Sallie of having had any hand in the disappearance, and where else to look he knew not. But on Saturday the ninth day after the calamity he received a letter from Sallie herself, which he read with a mixture of hope and fear that almost broke his heart:

Dear sir: ... I have, of course, heard of your loss, and I can say with out fear of your misunderstanding me, that it interested me. Let me also remark at the outset that the rewards you offer would not be acceptable to me even were I to become entitled to them. But as you may easily imagine, my mind, since our last meeting, has not been entirely at ease; and if I were able to forward your efforts in this affair I should feel justified in hoping that any hostile designs you may have against me would undergo some modification. It is for this reason that I address you. I do not wish to exaggerate the value of the information I possess—it may lead to nothing. But, at any rate, I believe I have come into possession of something that may turn out a clew, and if you will call at my house alone at noon to-morrow I will tell you what it is. I must stipulate, however, that you show this letter to no one, nor intimate that you have received it, for I will not run the risk of being forestalled or interfered with in the matter. You can, of course, disregard this letter if you choose, or you can attempt to draw my secret from me by force; but if you know me well you will do neither of these things, but accept my invitation under the conditions that I have imposed."

There might, no doubt, be personal danger to the count in going to this rendezvous. Sallie Matchin and he were on terms of deadly enmity, and nothing would suit her better than to have him out of the way. Going alone to her house he might easily fall into a fatal ambush, for perilous though it might be to her, she might think it worth while to ... him out of the way ... remove the only chance remaining to her to escape. And since no one was to know on what errand he had gone, the chances were against his fate being discovered.

Nevertheless, after weighing all considerations, he resolved to go. It was a chance, and the only one that had offered itself. Were he to neglect it he might repent it forever. The only precaution he took was to place a revolver in his pocket, and at twelve o'clock the next day he rang the bell at Sallie Matchin's door.

Sallie, of course, was far too clever to think of attempting to influence her visitor by accentuating the seductiveness of her beauty. She had already experienced the ill success of such an effort, and even had it been otherwise a man in an agony about one woman is not in humor to be attracted by another, apart from the question of previous enmity. But Sallie enjoyed her beauty on her own account, and took pleasure in adorning it. So the tiger seems to feel a pride in her glossy stripes and the coral snake in its gaudy scales. This woman had never felt so sweet a satisfaction with herself and her prospect as when she bade her visitor welcome that day, and she looked as she felt. At the first glance there seemed to emanate from her the pure bloom and freshness of May itself, but as one looked more closely he became conscious of something behind this innocent and balmy aspect which was as poisonous and cruel as sin. The rich glowing color, the queenly grace, the dark, dauntless eyes, the smiling curving lips, the sparkle of a jewel here and there, and a certain oriental luxuriousness of costume and demeanor, all contributed to render her a splendid, pestilential creature such as the women of mediæval Italy might have been or Cleopatra. There she stood like a queen in her kingdom, and she greeted the count with a smile of pleasure so bright and spontaneous that, had he been in a mood to speculate about it, he might have imagined she was glad to see him for his own sake.

"I am heartily glad to see you, Count de Lisle," she said. "I thought it even chances that you did not come. You evidently have courage. Shall I clap my hands and let the assassins spring forth upon you?" She actually did clap her hands as she spoke, and at the signal the curtains in a doorway at the upper part of the room parted, and in came—not a band of assassins, but—a pretty French maid in waiting, with the Russian samovar on a tray. Sallie watched her guest under her eyelashes but he did not even turn his head to see who entered. He was turned to sterner issues than this, and Sallie smiled again.

"I am here on business," he said, seating himself in the chair she indicated, "and I must request you to conduct this interview on a business basis. You say you have something to sell that I want to buy. If you prove that you have it you can name your price."

"Oh, my dear count, you forget that I am a woman, with all a woman's foibles and frailties," she exclaimed. "Women cannot move in straight lines like bullets; they must undulate like snakes. Besides, I want to feel that I am a human being dealing with another human being, not one part of an abstract commercial transaction. You must remember that this is one of the most interesting moments of my life. You cannot expect me to let it pass by in so frigid a manner. I must get what meat there is out of it; or if you cannot spare the time and patience you can always get up and go away. But I give you fair warning that I will not tell you what you want to know until I have told you everything I want you to hear."

"Perhaps, you had better give me some assurance, in the first place, that you can tell me what I want to know."

Sallie hesitated a moment and her hand moved toward a box on the table. But she withdrew it, and said: "No, I will not do even that. You think me unreasonable, of course, but I can't help it. I must conduct this affair in my own way or not at all."

This whimsical pretense of feminine fussiness in the face of a situation so grim and tragic had a certain infernal humor about it that almost made the count laugh. It was as if she were to protest that it would quite make her head ache to murder a man with a carving knife, an Italian poniard of the Fifteenth century was the only instrument she could think of operating with.

"Go on, then," he said. "There is a limit, but I hope, on all accounts you wont transcend it. Recollect that I am too desperate."

"Come, that is a bond of sympathy at any rate," exclaimed Sallie in a musical warble. "Now we chat together cosily!"

A HOUSEKEEPER'S EXPERIENCE.

"My house-cleaning looked like a mountain, but I had used Pearline for some things, and in my desperation I resolved to experiment still further with it. My first step was to wash the winter blankets and the blanket wrappers of the family. I took one-half a small package of Pearline and poured a pailful of boiling water on it, stirring it meanwhile. I could not wait for every particle to dissolve, so strained it through an old towel into a tub two thirds full of warm water, put my blankets into this and let them remain about twenty minutes or half an hour, stirring them about every few moments. I then lifted them out into another tub of clear water of the same temperature as the first, and repeated the stirring process for a few moments. Lastly, lifted them into a third tub of water still of the same temperature with a little blueing added, and folding them nicely, I loosened the tension on the wringer and wrung them lightly through it, taking them one at a time as soon as finished, to the line and hanging evenly across the middle, being careful not to stretch them over the line, but pull and stretch them below, that they might be even. The wrappers were treated in the same way, and hung over the line by the back seam, and when nearly dry each front edge pinned evenly to a line. All dried to look and feel like new.

"I then descended to the cellar, and gathered up every washable thing, empty firkins and crocks, preserve jars that had missed a proper cleaning, empty pails, etc., and all emerged sweet and shining from a hot Pearline bath. Shelves were cleaned with it, and it took the place of strength for removing dirt. Ascending to the chambers, when the carpets were up Pearline left my floors and paint clean and sweet without hard scrubbing, slop, or sand.

"All the washable draperies, including the lace ones of the parlor, were treated the same as the blankets, with the exception of a little boiled starch added to the blueing water. The lace draperies were hung lengthwise, and old sheets were first hung over the line, to which the lace was fastened.

"In a word: wherever strength was needed I let Pearline do the work, and you would hardly believe what it could accomplish, and what a saving of labor, time and patience it proved."—[Boston Watchman.

DR. NICHOLLS.
HIS LAST WEEK IN BANGOR.

Dr. Nicholls, the English Specialist leaves the city June 14, after a highly successful season of two months, in which time he has skilfully treated and cured hundreds of the worst cases. The Doctor's departure is regretted on all sides, and his return to the city will be awaited with patience by the many people whom he has benefitted. He will come back to Bangor early in the fall for a few days only. His large business here justifies an earlier return but pressing engagements elsewhere preclude it.

Next Saturday will be the last opportunity to consult him.

After this week his P. O. address will be Portland, Me.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

stance of it remaining unimpaired, section 33, ch. 18, reading as follows:

"When a way is laid out over such lands, they shall decide whether any tract or part thereof will thereby be enhanced in value; and they may make as many divisions as are equitable, conforming as nearly as convenient to known divisions or townships; and assess upon each division adjudged to be enhanced in value a sum proportionate to the benefits likely to result to it from the establishment of the way. The assessments may be made at such rates per acre as they judge to be necessary for making and opening the way, and for paying the expenses attending it."

The phrase here is when a way is "laid out over" such lands. This section instructs the commissioners what to do in connection with the act of locating the road as a necessary part thereof or adjunct thereto. The words "laid out" do not imply that a location has been made by any written report, because certain questions are to be considered after the road is "laid out," the decision of which is to be made a part of the report. In locating a road it is indispensable that the commissioners decide at whose expense the road shall be made, and whether the lands crossed by the road will be benefited thereby, and their report must show the facts. Pingree v. County Commissioners, 30 Maine 351.

The act of 1868 ch. 191 constituted a more radical change, two appeals being allowable, instead of the one existing before that time, an appeal from location and also from assessment, in each instance the appeal to be entered and heard at the first term of the Supreme Judicial Court held after the decision by the commissioners, neither party having any right of exceptions. This act provided that "when a road is so laid out and over such lands, the commissioners shall immediately thereafter, assess thereon such an amount as they judge to be necessary for making and opening the road and paying the expenses attending it." There was to be no lapse of time between the location and assessment more than that one act would precede the other, all the different acts constituting a continuous proceeding. To require the commissioners to do one act immediately after another act would necessitate that both acts be done at the same session, for otherwise such a result could not possibly be accomplished. A future session would not be immediately afterwards.

The revision of 1871 retains substantially the provisions of the act of 1868, to be found in sections of two chapters of the statutes instead of in one as before that time. R. S. of 1871, c. 18, Sec. 32, c. 6, Sec. 51. Then for the first time appears the phrase as in the present statutes, "when a road is laid over,"—the previous phrasing having been "laid out over."

Then came the act of 1876 which laid the foundation for the present controversy, in amending section fifty one of chapter six of the revised statutes of 1871, by striking out the word "immediately" and inserting instead the words "at their first regular session," the substituted requirement being that the commissioners, when they lay a road over unincorporated lands, shall at their first regular session afterwards levy the necessary assessments. The meaning of this amendment is the key of the question to be solved.

The present revised statutes repeat the provision in the same words. The words are at the first regular session, not the next, after the road is laid over the land. In the light of previous legislation, does this not mean that the assessments are to be made as soon as the work can be done at any regular session of the commissioners occurring or existing after their report is filed, if the assessments are not, though they might be, made a part of the report itself? It will be remembered that, from 1821 to 1876, through all the changes of the statute, the idea of expeditious assessments is retained. Did the amendment presuppose that the assessments would not be made as seasonably as before? Inasmuch as before 1876 any delay had been so often peremptorily forbidden, can it be that a prolonged delay [in this case, six months] was then intended? Our impression is that the idea of the change was not to dispense with the customary promptness required but to preserve it, not to create delay but to prevent it, by ensuring action at the first regular session instead of at some adjournment of such session. We are informed that a practice had grown up to some extent of making the assessments after short adjournments of the regular sessions. The amendment would correct that practice. An advantage may have been supposed to be also promoted by ensuring a certainty of time and place for the hearing and decision of the question of benefits. If the assessments be made at the first session, as done in this case, it will inevitably be immediately or soon after the road is run out over the land. The commissioners are required to make their return at their next regular session after the hearing is had. R. S., ch. 18, Sec. 5.

What expediency would there be in the delay that a continuance would entail? Commissioners can exercise a better judgment on the questions presented for their decision, acting immediately after hearing the parties and examining the land. It is an advantage to all parties to have an early knowledge of the result on the questions of both location and assessment. The latter may be so satisfactory that there will be no disposition to appeal from either decision. If no appeal be entered, a delay of six months before other proceedings following assessment can be instituted, which consume a long period for their accomplishment, would seem to be time inconsiderately lost. It has always been required to include an assessment of damages in a report of laying out a highway, and why not important to assess benefits as expeditiously? In the case of this road, if there were damages, as well as benefits, to be assessed, the commissioners were obliged to state in their return the amount of damages, to whom allowed, and when payable. R. S. ch 18, sec 4. Why assess damages in July and benefits in January afterwards?

It is urged that persons interested had no notice that the assessments were to be made. They had as much notice as they would have, whether the proper occasion for their appearance be at one regular session or another.

Only one notice is ever given in any case, and that brings parties into court, where they are supposed to be in attendance during all subsequent stages of the proceeding.

The meaning of the words "laid out" has been discussed in the arguments. The words here are "laid over," and it is very likely the latter phrase was intentionally used as better expressing the idea to be conveyed. The words "laid out" used in reference to ways do not always have the same signification. They will be found to be used as descriptive of all conditions of a way, such as a way voted to be built, a way being built, or a way built. The context usually determines the meaning of the expression.

It is urged by the petitioner that the case of Appleton v. County Commissioners, 80 Maine 284, makes in his favor on this question. We think it may have that tendency in a portion of the argument of the court, but the result of the case does not necessarily have such a bearing. The question presented in this case was not considered or noticed in that, although slumbering in the papers of that case. The court hesitated, in the determination of that case, which of two theories to adopt as best applicable to it. One theory was that the statute requires the commissioners to proceed with the question of benefits and decide it independently of other issues and questions, so that their determination would stand, unless modified upon appeal therefrom, or rendered nugatory by the location failing to be sustained on appeal. By that mode the commissioners would perform finally all the duties incumbent on them in the premises. That mode would have its advantages, as readily seen in the light of the present investigation. The assessments would be conditionally made, dependent on the validity of the location.

The other theory was that an appeal from location not only suspends that branch of the proceedings, but nullifies all assessments already made, and postpones the authority for making them until after the appeal from location has been finally disposed of. Inasmuch as the commissioners are required, when they assess benefits upon the land, to appoint a time, not exceeding two years from the date of the assessment, within which the road is to be made and opened, and are to do certain other things named in section seventy-eight, before cited, and as the prolonged proceedings now allowed on an appeal from location might exceed such time or consume the greater portion of it, and,

Cooking for Dyspeptics.

An Appetizing and Strengthening Food that is Highly Recommended.

In a recent newspaper article is given a long list of some one or two hundred different things that a dyspetic should not eat—all the way from hash to fresh bread. It is easy enough for him to know what he should not eat, especially the second time a dish is set before him. But it is hard for dyspeptics and those troubled with weak digestion, to find something that is really palatable and at the same time of benefit.

The eminent Dr. J. Milner Fothergill, whose death has deprived the medical profession of an authority upon dietetics, wrote:

"What is wanted is something which will set easily upon the stomach, and at the same time require but a minimum of the digestive act." He gives the following receipt for a dish that is adapted to the weakest stomach. "Upon three tablespoonfuls of Lactated Food moistened with cold water, pour a half pint of hot milk. (If milk is not relished use hot water.) Stir thoroughly and it is ready for use. Season to suit the taste with wine or aromatics."

But we hear some reader ask, "Is not Lactated Food an Infant Food?"

Yes, and is not a dyspeptic's stomach weaker than an infant's? If you have suffered with dyspepsia you will certainly answer yes to our question.

This Food that Dr. Fothergill so highly recommends contains all of the life sustaining and strength-giving food elements. It is in every way a perfect food.

Dr. W. H. Sturtevant, M. D., of Pawtucket, R. I., gave Lactated Food a thorough test and writes: "I have found it all that could be desired in nutritive qualities."

Isaac Farrar, M. D., 28 King street, Dorchester, Boston, writes: "I feel warranted in saying that Lactated Food is superior to all other foods in cases of indigestion. It is as valuable for the adult as the infant."

The words of these physicians, some of them world-renowned, should carry the weight they deserve. Their experience with Lactated Food is most gratifying, but they are not alone, for the manufacturers of this Food have upon file thousands of similar letters testifying to the health-restoring and strength-giving power of this delicious food to all dyspeptic and debilitated conditions.

HEALTH

Is the Great Problem of Life. How to Preserve it ought to be the Study of Mankind.

In presenting this notice to the public I respectfully ask those into whose hands it may fall to give it their careful consideration. Having enjoyed a large and extended practice in Chronic Diseases for many years, I am confident that I am able to perform all that I profess to, and that the remedies I apply are calculated to produce the most satisfactory results. I cordially invite all who may be suffering, no matter what the disorders, to call upon me, and I will most cheerfully tell them if they have any disease and where it is located, and the organs and parts affected free of charge. Charges for treatment moderate. The Poor treated for Half price.

This cut represents a person afflicted with Facial Catarrh.

CATARRH

In its worst form, and Diseases caused by catarrh such as Deafness, Weak eyes, Hacking Cough, Sore Throat, Pain in Head, Bronchitis, constant clearing of throat, all of which lead to hasty consumption, are permanently cured by Dr. Nicholls.

Over one half the persons troubled with Catarrh have an offensive breath, which is very disagreeable and sickening to those with whom they come in close contact.

Now, reader, why is this? We will tell you. Catarrh is an ulcer formed in the posterior nerves just above the uvula, the passage between the nose and throat, the ulcer continues to eat and discharge a poisonous flow of pus, running down the throat into the stomach and lungs. This my friend, is what causes the constant clearing of the throat. Can you wonder why you do not have good health with all this poisonous matter constantly running into your stomach? The remedy is applied directly to the ulcer, cleanses and heals in a few applications. The treatment is very simple and harmless.

Diseases of Women. Female Weakness, Debility, and all Diseases of the Eye and Ear

Dr. Nicholls can guarantee a permanent cure in each and every case he may undertake of the following diseases, and if your case is not curable, he will frankly tell you so. Deafness, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Epilepsy, Cancer, Goitre (Big Neck), Diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Liver, Nervous and General Debility, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bowels, Heart Diseases, Falling of the Womb, Prolapsus, Uteri, Barrenness, Bronchitis, Constipation, Asthma, Night Sweats, Piles, Fissure, and all Diseases of the Lower Bowels. Also Private, Special and Nervous Diseases of the Urinary and Sexual Organs.

YOUNG MEN who have become victims of solitary vice, that dreadful and destructive habit which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of exalted and brilliant intellect, may call with confidence of a cure being effected.

REMARKABLE CURES perfected in all cases which have been neglected or unskillfully treated. No experiments or failures, parties treated by mail or express, but where possible, personal consultation is preferred. Address with stamp enclosed.

Cases and correspondence confidential. Treatment sent C. O. D. to any part of the United States. Free examination of the Urine. Each person applying for medical treatment should send or bring from 2 to 4 ounces of Urine, which will receive a careful and microscopic examination.
